

The very auggestion of an entertainment with such a torrid temperature seems almost too great ar exertion even for the mind. Happily most people are of the same opinion and the effort to attend one few are called upon to make. The old saying "In time of peace prepare for war" always seemed a wise one, and so on the same principle, in these leisure days is a good time to arrange for social gatherings which are sure to come sooner or later. In a magazine for June is a pretty suggestion for a children's lawn party. Fancy dress is chosen, and the character of the costuming is particularly appropriate for a lawn. Each little girl represents a flower and each boy an insect. One little maid personates a cowslip, wearing a yellow surah dress, trimmed with embroidered chiffon of the same shade and cowslips. A sweet little blonde was described, dressed as a pansy. Her quaint, long-skirted gown was of bluish-purple India silk with pansies appliqued around the bottom, a sash and sleeves of soft yellow pilk, and a hat shaped like a pansy, made of purple and yellow velvet. A pansy petal-shaped bib under her chin made her face appear like the center of the flower. One little girl was a pink rosebud. Her dress was of pink mull, with a corselet of green silk and rose vines trailing over he skirt; a violet wore a dress of green surab, with fringes of wood violets; a daisy was in white full skirts and a yellow waist, and a red rose—full blown—was a brilliant bit or color among the fairy-like costumes. Each girl carried a wand with a bunch of the flowers she represented tied at the top. Among the boys was a grasshopper in a green suit, a locust in brown and a small boy in a snug suit of brown was a mosquito, and amused himself, as well as others, by buzzing. In connection with this the lemonade might he served from a bowl shaped like a flower, and the ices might be flowershaped. With all the pretty shaded mulls there are in the shops, mothers with artistic ideas could fashion a gown to represent almost any flower she fancied. A rainbow mull, of all the seven tints, which is one of the exquisite results of the manu-facturer's art, could be used with fine effect. Such a party on some of the fine lawns, in this city, would be like a scene from fairy land.
